Green's Nebraska Indians vs Clay City. Ball Game Played July 4, 1903.

(For The Richmond Climax.)

From far-off Nebraska the Indians came down; They'd heard of the fame of Clay City town; Of the boys with outcome suggestive of won, The gay, jolly leaders, our champions were.

They'd heard of the trophies our players had won, Their betting and pinching and frequent home-run; How league after league from Meigs to Maine On the Clay City diamond though valiant was slain.

And they picked their tents all off for they were heart to enter our game stadium.

Frank the state dealer and Jimmie the better, seeing their trepidation, went out with presents and promise of home, besought them to enter in, and measure bats with the C-2's.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 15 . . . 1908

(For the Clinax)

But yesterday a tender ear

Did find some new thoughts.

Not where my darling mother

But where my heart was thought

By an enchanting melody

Who was the bid with a kiss and cut.

Was something in the sky, methinks

And something in the blood

(Such gentle state of mind)

And a melody of soul

That made me long and reach for her.

My darling heart's sweet music

I heard my soul with the pain of her

That rose in me to the night.

And dreamed again the arms of her

Hold me as close and tight

As when into each other's breast

We pressed what in us was best.

Ye stars, so tenderly beautiful

That have deceived my love

Page flutters no more

Can't then my fate divide—

Is there no golden-kissed heart

Leading me together again?
